Note: The included macro has been copied from the Shortcut keyboard that ships with WP.

Since my job requires testing applications and writing about features of WP, I constantly find myself editing codes to look at their settings. Editing a code may take as few as three keystrokes, or as many as seven. In addition, I usually have to delete the previous code to avoid clutter.

Because of this, my favorite application is the included EDITCODE.WPM macro. With this macro, it takes only two keystrokes to edit most codes, and the previous code is usually deleted.

To use the macro, press Reveal Codes (Alt-F3) and highlight the code to edit. Then simply play the macro and you're immediately taken into that particular code's editing screen. Make your changes, then press Exit (F7). You'll be taken directly back to the document screen.
